Choice Poetry.

SABBATH MORNING.

BY "WILD FLOWER."

I love the Sabbath's holy hours—
Its rest from worldly care;
For earth seems nearer on this day,
To you bright world so fair.

The shades look down so lovingly,
And clouds seem flitting forms,
That leave Heaven, bend o'er Earth,
To shield us from life's storms.

Too won our hearts from earth away,
To seek a home above,
Where ne'er a sinful thought intrudes—
Where all is joy and love.

Where angel harpers, clothed in gold,
Kneel round the jeweled Throne—
Where sad figures else are never heard,
And fancies never known.

'Tis Sabbath's holy even time!
And silence walks the earth,
While all around, above, below,
To sacred thoughts give birth—
To thoughts that willy-nilly fling back,
Gave sadly after the past.

Reverend thoughts long since fled,
Or joys too sweet to last.
The thought that vainly seek to pierce
The future's unknown fate,
While hope's bright finger points us on,
To Heaven's holy gate—
To thoughts that lead us to the time
We say to earth farewell!

Hoping to meet our loved friends,
Where saints and angels dwell.
To the great thought that God has given
To man alone, eternal life—
That all his other works decay,
Though with such grace and beauty rife.

To man! the germ from Paradise!
Planted by God's eternal hand!
Redeem'd by Christ from sin and death,
To join in Heaven an angel band.

THE RUNAWAY MATCH; OR OFFSHOOTING THE MARK.

BY FRED. HUNTER.

A great many years since, when bright-eyed and fair-haired lasses were not so plenty in New England as they now are, there dwelt in the town of P—, a pretty village, distant, then, some five-and-twenty miles from "Market-town," a peculiar comely and graceful maiden, who had a peculiarly ugly and cross-grained, but wealthy old father.

Minnie was Danforth's only child, and report said truly that she would be his sole legatee. The old man was a sturdy farmer, and was estimated to be worth full ten thousand dollars; at that period a very handsome fortune, to be sure.

The sparkling eyes and winning manners of Minnie Danforth had stirred up the finer feelings of the whole male portion of the village, and her suitors were numerous; but her father was particular, and none succeeded in making headway with him or her.

In the meantime, Minnie had a true and loyal lover, in secret. Who would have supposed for one moment that such a fellow would dare to look upon beauty and comparative refinement? His name was Walker, or, as he was generally called, "Joe." Joe Walker was and was simply a farmer, employed by old Danforth, who had entrusted Joe with the management of his place for two or three years.

But a very excellent farmer, and a right good man; this plain, unassuming, but good-looking Joe Walker, he was young, too, being only twenty-three; and he actually fell in love with the beautiful, pleasant, and joyous Minnie Danforth, his old employer's only daughter. But the strongest part of the occurrence was, that Minnie returned his love earnestly, truly, and frankly, and promised to wed him at the first opportunity.

Things went on merrily for a time, but old Danforth discovered certain glances and attentions between them, which excited his suspicion. Very soon afterwards, Joe learned the old man's mind, indirectly, in regard to his future disposal of Minnie's hand, and he quickly saw that his case was a hopeless one, unless he resorted to stratagem, and so he set his wit at once to work.

By an agreement, an apparently settled coldness and distance was observed by the lovers towards each other, for five or six months; and the father saw, (as he believed), with satisfaction, that his previous suspicions and fears had been all premature. Then, by agreement also between them, Joe absented himself from the house at evening; and night after night, for full three months longer, did Joe disappear as soon as his work was finished, to return home only at late bed-time. This was unusual, and old Danforth determined to know the cause of it.

Joe frankly confessed that he was in love with a man's daughter, who resided less than three miles distant; but, after a faithful attachment between them for several months, the old man had utterly refused to entertain his application for the young girl's hand.

"And you like her?"
"Yes, sir—yes!"
"Then marry her," said old Danforth.
"But I can't—the father objects."

"Pooh!" continued Danforth, "let him do so; what need you care? Run away with her."
"Elope?"
"Yes. Off with you at once! If the gal will join—all right. Marry her—bring her here; you shall have the little cottage at the foot of the lane; I'll furnish it for you; your wages shall be increased; and the old man may like it, or not, as he will!"

"But me no buts, Joe. Do as I bid you, and go about it at once; and—"
"You will stand by me?"
"Yes, to the last. I know you, Joe. You're a good fellow, a good workman, and will make anybody a good son, or husband."

"The old fellow will be so, though,"
"Who cares, I say? Go on quickly, but quietly."
"To-morrow-night, then," said Joe.
"Yes," said Danforth.
"I'll hire Colver's horse—"
"No you shan't!"
"Not?"

"I say no. Take my horse—the best one—your Morgan; he'll take you off in fine style, in the new phaeton."
"Exactly!"
"And as soon as you're spliced, come right back here, and a jolly time we'll have of it at the old house."

"Her father will kill me!"
"Bah! He is an old fool, whoever he is; he don't know your good qualities, Joe, so well as I do. Don't be afraid; a faint heart, you know, never won a fair woman." "The old man will be astounded."
"Never mind, go on. We'll turn the laugh on him. I'll take care of you and your wife at any rate."

"You shall," said Danforth, and they parted in the best of spirits.
An hour after dark, on the following evening, Joe made his appearance, docketed in a nice new black suit, and really looking very comely. The old man bustled out to the barn with him, helped him to harness young Morgan to his new phaeton, and leading the spunky animal himself into the road, away went happy Joe Walker in search of his bride.

A few rods distant from the house, he found her, according to previous arrangement; and replying to the next village, the person very quickly made them one in holy wedlock. Joe took his bride, and soon dashed back to the town of P—, and halted at old Danforth's house, who was already looking for him with open arms.

"Is it done?" cried the old man.
"Yes—yes!" answered Joe.
"Bring her in, bring her in," continued the old fellow, in high glee: "never mind compliments, and no matter about the dark entry; here, here, Joe, to the right, in the best parlor; we'll have a time now, sure!"

And the anxious farmer rushed away for lights; returning almost immediately.
"Here's the certificate, sir," said Joe.
"Yes, yes—"
"And this is my wife," he added, as he passed up his beautiful bride—the bewitching and lovely Minnie Danforth!

"What!" roared the old fellow, "what did you say, Joe, you villain, you scamp, you! You said you were a—"
"It is the truth, sir; we are lawfully married. You advised me to this course, you assisted me, you planned the whole affair. You lent me your horse, you thought me, last evening, worthy of any man's child. You encouraged me, you promised to stand by me, you offered me the cottage at the foot of the lane, you—"
"I didn't! I deny it. You can't prove it; you're a—"
"Caluly now, sir," continued Joe. And the entrances of the happy couple were at once united to quell the old man's ire, and to persuade him to acknowledge the union.

The father relented at last. It was a job of his own manufacture, and he saw how useless it would be, finally, to attempt to destroy it. He gave in reluctantly; and the fair Minnie Danforth was overjoyed to be duly acknowledged as Mrs. Joe Walker.

The marriage proved a joyful one; and the original assertion of old Danforth proved truthful in every respect. The cunning lover was a good son and a faithful husband, and lived many years, to enjoy the happiness which followed upon his runaway match; while the old man never cared much about the details of the elopement, for he saw how completely he had overthrown the mark!

"Parson Greene was in the habit, sometimes, of drawing upon a barrel of sermons, bequeathed him by his father, who was also a minister. Upon one occasion he got hold of a sermon, by a mistake, which the old gentleman had once preached to the State Prison convicts. It opened well, and the congregation were becoming deeply interested, when all at once the parson surprised them with the information, that 'had it not been for the clemency of the Governor, every one of them would have been hung a long time ago.'"

"Grandma," said a little girl, the other day, "what makes it thunder and lightning?"
"Well, my dear, I expect it happens in this way—the light from the blessed sun gets kind of lodged in the clouds, and when a lot of 'em gets together, it gets afore and bursts. The streaks that fly out makes the lightning, the noise of the burst makes the thunder."

"If you would not be known to do anything, never do it."

A Merited Rebuke.
Some time ago a man was tried at Cambridge for a robbery committed on an aged gentleman in her own house. The Judge was Baron Smith, a man of an amiable character for religion. He asked the gentleman if the prisoner at the bar was the person who robbed her.

"Truly, my lord," said she, "I cannot positively say it was he, for it was duskish when I was robbed; so dark that I could hardly discern the features of his face."
"Where were you when he robbed you?"
"I was in a closet that joins my bed-chamber, and he had got into my house while my servant had gone out on an errand."

"What day of the week was it?"
"It was the Lord's day evening, my lord."
"How had you been employed when he robbed you?"
"My lord, I am a Protestant dissent; I had been at the meeting that day, and had retired into my closet in the evening for prayer and meditation on what I had heard through the day. She had no sooner uttered these words, than the court, which was crowded with some hundreds of students, rang with a peal of loud laughter.

The judge looked round the court as one astonished, and with a decent solemnity laid his hand upon the bench, as if he was going to rise, and with no small emotion of spirit, spoke to the following effect:—"Good God! where am I? Am I in the place of one of the universities of this kingdom, where it is to be supposed that young gentlemen are educated in the principles of religion as well as in all useful learning; and for such to laugh in so indecent a manner, on hearing an aged christian tell that she retired into her closet on a Lord's day evening for prayer and meditation! Blush and be ashamed all of you, if you are capable of it, as well you may; and if any of your tutors are here, let them blush also to see in holy irreligion a manner their pupils and students behave."

And then turning to the lady, he said: "don't be discouraged, madam, by this piece of rude and unmanly as well as irreligious usage; you have no reason to be ashamed of what you have on this occasion, and in this public manner, said, on the contrary you may glory in it. It adds dignity to your character, and shame belongs to them who would expose it to ridicule."

Moving.
Reader, did you ever move? If so, you can appreciate the following poetic effusion:

"Come, Sally, catch hold here, and give us a lift, let us pull up the carpet and set it adrift; unroll the bedsteads and pack up the quilts, be careful the crockery doesn't get split; let the lady yell murder, the boy go to grass, but beware how you handle that basket of glass. Take the stove pipe apart, set the stove on the cart, let the bureau remain till next load, &c. see that the victuals don't spill in the kettles, or the babies fall off in the road. Never mind about to-day wife, only furnish us something to eat, for you know it's the first of April, wife, and we want to keep everything neat. I'm sorry we moved all the chairs, for we've no place to sit down and rest, but you may squat down on the stairs or floor, or just where you think best. Drive slow, Mr. Cartman, while steady we go—there! hold up a moment, I knew it would be so—the soap grease has split on the floor—the vinegar jug is now springing a leak; oh, I wish we were all in the middle of next week." Thus will the day in noise pass away, and none will be happy on the first of April day.

A rich merchant named Hogg, once requested a wagoner to bring him a load of corn in a stated time, which he failed to do, and did not bring it till the next day after he had promised it. The merchant, as might be expected, refused it. "Well," replied the wagoner, "you are the first hog I ever knew to refuse corn."

Wanted to See his Father.—We have heard that, previous to a recent well-contested battle, a young volunteer officer asked leave of a certain celebrated Major General to go and see his father, who was on his death-bed. "Go," said the commander, smiling sarcastically, "you honor your father and mother, that your days may be long in the land."

Take Care of your Pockets.—There is a book with the dangerous title of the Pocket Lawyer. We shouldn't like a book with this title much, for we are afraid that, if we once get the Lawyer in our pocket, we never should be able to get him out again.

Good.—Two married ladies, in St. Louis, last week, met a young man upon the street, and gave him a severe conchiding. They said he had been enticing their husbands away from home at night, and taking them to improper places.

A Hint to Lawyers.—The Albany "Dutchman" expresses surprise that a young man can consent to load about the corners as they do, when a good dose of arsenic can be purchased for six pence.

A good conscience is to the soul what health is to the body; it preserves a constant ease and serenity within, and more than counterbalances all the calamities and afflictions which can possibly fall upon us.

Whenever we drink too deep of pleasure, we are sure to find a sediment at the bottom of the cup, which embitters the draught we have quaffed with so much avidity.

A bitter jest is the poison of friendship.

The Girls of California.

Some young fellow, writing to his sister in Zanesville, Ohio, says:

"It is a rare treat in this country to enter a home hallowed by the presence of a lady, where, instead of a floor covered with dirty boots and 'tater peelings,' you see it nicely carpeted with coffee sacks neatly stitched together; and then to see in what trim order they keep their cupboards, whilst we men, miserable housekeepers, that we are, pile everything pell-mell on one shelf; bread, meat, candles, soap, grease, hats, and cigar stumps all together."

"We take more interest here in a love affair than you do at home in a presidential election. If a gentleman is courting a lady, the precise time when he popped the question, and what was said on the occasion, is known through the country in the short space of no time. Men are seized with hallucination in regard to female beauty, as bewitched Don Quixote when he invested a red-faced, tub-shaped city wench with the comeliness and charms of a Venus. An old maid was lately married in our neighborhood, who had, no doubt, been singing 'why don't the men propose?' for the last twenty years. She was red haired, squint-eyed and frizzled—suns teeth and sans money—in short she had about as little pretensions to beauty as the old gal whose husband had to practice kissing the cow a year, before he could screw up his courage to give her a smack."

Cork.
Many persons use corks used daily without knowing from whence come those useful materials. Corks are cut from large slabs of the cork tree, a species of oak, which grows wild in the southern countries in Europe. The tree is stripped of its bark at about sixteen years old; but before stripping it off, the tree is not cut down as in the case of the oak. It is taken while the tree is growing, and the operation may be repeated every eight or nine years; the quality of the bark continuing each time to improve as the age of the tree increases.

When the bark is taken off, it is slung in the flames of a strong fire, and after being soaked for a considerable time in water, it is placed under heavy weights in order to render it straight. Its extreme lightness, the ease with which it can be compressed, and its elasticity are properties so peculiar to this substance, that no efficient substitute for it has been discovered. The valuable properties of cork were known to the Greeks and Romans, who employed it for all the purposes for which it is used at present, with the exception of stopples. The ancients, mostly used cement for stopping the mouths of bottles or vessels. The Egyptians are said to have made coffins of cork, which being spread on the inside with resinous substance, preserved dead bodies from decay. In modern times cork was not generally used for stopples to bottles till about the seventeenth century, cement being used until then for that purpose.

Every good act, says Mahomet, is charity. Your smiling in your brother's face is charity; an exhortation of your fellow-man to virtuous deeds is equal to almsgiving; your putting a wanderer on the right road is charity; your removing stones and thorns and other obstructions from the road is charity. A man's true wealth hereafter, is the good he does in this world to his fellow-men. When he dies, people will say, "What property has he left behind him?" But the angels who examine him in the grave, will ask, "What good deeds hast thou sent before thee?"

The happiness of many a lifetime is made of little pleasures, common blessings and joyful moments—all very trifling to look at singly and alone. But he who waits for happiness until everything around him turns to his will, waits long and fruitlessly. He who can enjoy his joy after great acquisition has few holidays. He who has his life's energy for the performance of great deeds has a fair prospect of a life of leisure. He who feels only for great woes, and has charity but for the deepest miseries, will have but few demands upon his sympathy and benevolence.

It is said that in Venice there are thousands who never see a hill or a wood, or an acre of corn growing, or a vineyard, green field, or even a horse and carriage. The emals are traversed by gondolas, a species of canoes, twenty feet long, with a cabin in the center, sufficiently capacious for the accommodation of five or ten persons.

To give an idea of the great degree of drunkenness existing in the city of New York, it is stated that Justice Lehigh had no less than fifty-seven prisoners brought before him at the tombs, on Sunday morning, charged with drunkenness and consequent disorderly conduct. A movement was made a day or two ago, in the Board of Assistants, to increase the city police force, which already numbers 530 men, and cost last year $300,000. The arrests last year were 18,646, of which 130,972 were the result of drinking.

Bank Note Peddlers.—The Cincinnati Enquirer, in noting the statement of Dr. Buckler, of that city, that smallpox is often communicated by means of small notes, says:

"The teller of one of the banks of Columbus, a sensible young man, contracted the disease by handing a bunch of bills which had been transmitted from the city, where the smallpox was then quite prevalent and in malignant form. The young man died—and, by such a seemingly harmless channel of communication, was that loathsome pestilence the cause of a family losing their mainstay in life."

Cravats.

Professor Hamilton's remarks at the Buffalo Medical College on asphyxia, and particularly that form caused by wearing tight cravats, may be of interest to the general reader.

Cravats were first worn by the Romans in the sixteenth century as a part of their military dress.

Public Speakers. Members of Congress and Clergymen, have literally hung themselves by wearing cravats and stocks, high and tight, thereby impeding the return of blood from the head; this can be explained on Physiological principles; the brain, in speaking, is excited to increased action, a larger quantity of blood is sent to the head, and unless it can find a ready return, produces congestion and apoplexy.

Students are not altogether free from the effects of this ligation of the neck. It is surprising how little pressure is necessary to prevent the ready flow of blood from the head; those who bend their heads forward, as in writing or studying, are apt to feel a dizziness and heaviness in the head, which loosening their cravats or collars altogether relieves, and the mind returns to its original clearness. In clergymen who are particularly prone to bungle their necks with large cravats, bronchitis is induced, and the vocal cords become relaxed as the consequence. Men who speak extemporaneously, can speak longer and with greater ease than those who read, as their voice is not confined as much to one key, and can be modulated with greater freedom.—Albany Register.

Smoking and Sallowness.—The Home Journal justly remarks:

The next generation of "American men" promise to be more sallow, more puny, and more dyspeptic than the one now laughed at by foreign travellers for their peculiarities. Reason why: smoking has become a positive "rage" among the schoolboys and youths, and every second little villain you see in the street, particularly if well dressed, has a cigar in his mouth.

It is better to tread the path of life cheerfully, skipping over the thorns and briars that obstruct our way, than sit down under every hedge lamenting our hard fate. The thread of a cheerful man's life spins out longer than that of a man who is constantly sad and desponding. Prudent conduct in the concerns of life is highly necessary—but if distress succeeds, dejection and despair will not afford relief.—The best thing to be done when evil comes upon us, is not lamentation, but action; not to sit and suffer but to seek the remedy.

It is better to be laughed at than ruined.—Better to have a wife who, like Marial's Mamurra, cheapens everything, and buys nothing, than to be impoverished by one whose vanity will purchase everything, but whose pride will cheapen nothing.

A Scene noted in the Bells.
Conspicuous among the audience, says the Baltimore Argus, in the parquette of the Museum on Saturday night, was a country love-lorn swain with his intended. Whenever the dialogue on the stage turned upon love or marriage, the verdant Adonis bestowed a series of most energetic hugs upon his equally affectionate daisy, which not only attracted universal attention, but impeded the progress of the corps dramatic, who at times were unable to continue their roles from the laughter excited by the loving manueuvres. Wholly engrossed with the tender passion the turtles discovered not that general attention was attracted towards them, and commenced a kissing scene. During the progress of this very pleasant but too public pastime, a wag seated beside the bride that was to be, attached to her back a placard that was on his seat, labelled in large characters, "TAXEN."

The explosion of laughter that ensued was universal, upon which the affectionate pair dashed down stairs amid deafening cheers.

Two Thousand Pigs.
A country fellow who is neighbor, having bought some pigs, asked a neighbor for the use of a pen for a few days. Said he—"I have built been purchasing some twelve—two thousand and pigish." I want to put them in your pen, till I can fix a place for them." "Two thousand pigs?" exclaimed the neighbor, "why, my pen will hardly hold a dozen!" "You don't understand me, Mr. Head. I don't say two thousand pigs, but two thousand and pigish." "I hear you," said Mr. Head, "two thousand pigs." Why you must be crazy!" "I tell you again," exclaimed the man angrily, "I want not two thousand pigs, but two thousand and pigish." "Oh that is what you mean, eh? Well, the pen is at your service."

One, Two, Three and Go!—A couple of travellers lately took lodgings for about ten days at a tavern in York county, Pa. and faced sympathetically, drinking two or three bottles of wine daily. The last day a dispute arose about the speed of their horses, and they at last agreed to enter on the "quadrille contest." The landlord was assigned judge, each being the victor of his own horse. When they were mounted, the judge, like those in the Olympic games, gave the word, "One, Two, Three, and Go!" Off they went, and have never been seen nor heard of since—leaving the landlord in a state of consternation by having had the horse to be their judge.

Age of Presidential Candidates.—Cass and Webster about 70; Houston, Scott, Marcy, and Butler, over 60; Buchanan 62; Lane 50; Fillmore 52; Douglass, and Leavelle, about 40.

An Interesting Story.

Dr. Kane, already widely known as one of the heroes who sailed in search of Sir John Franklin with Mr. Grinnell's Expedition, and who has been delivering Lectures in the Cities, upon the Arctic Regions, has led a life of unexampled adventure, as the following account of it, up to his departure upon the Arctic Expedition, shows. "We have not recently encountered any narrative so thrilling. Why may we not hope for a book from Dr. Kane, comprising his remarkable experience?"

"No American, of his age, has ever seen so much of the perils of the world itself. He was Surgeon of the American Legation to China, and on his way to the Celestial regions, he spent some weeks on a foot tramp through the orange groves of Brazil, and about a month in tiger-hunting near Bombay. Hence, after a dozen unsuccessful attempts to smuggle himself in the forbidden lands of China, he went over to the Philippines, and by the aid of the good Monks of the interior of Manila, explored its fastnesses and volcanic wonders. He was the first man to descend into the great crater of the Taal, lowered down 200 feet over the brink by a bamboo rope tied round his middle, and brought back a bottle full of its sulphur waters, burning off his boots in the lava cinders. Leaving China, after a second visit, in which he encountered shipwreck, he passed to India as physician of the Drenthendur Dagore, and was palanquined for some three months through the wonders of its mountain architecture, the ancient glories of Caudy, the stupendous passes of the Ghaut country, visiting Madras, Pondicherry, and every spot that we have read of in the trial of Warren Hastings. Next to Upper Egypt, and Abyssinia, crossing the desert on his camel to the base of Jupiter Ammon, climbing at breakfast risk to the topstone, sounding the Colossus of Memnon, and exploring the tombs of the Pharaohs for a fortnight or three weeks, with Prof. Lepsius and his associates. Wrecked again while passing down the Nile, and wounded, in an encounter near Alexandria, he pushed across to Greece, and traversed every scene of classic interest, climbing to the Hippocrene Spring and sleeping on the shore of Marathon."

He returned by Italy, France, and England, only to rest a few weeks, before a cruise on the coast of Africa. Renewing some acquaintances which had been formed in Brazil, he was allowed to inspect the machinery of the slave trade, and to pass up into the interior, under the firm of Desouza, the great intermediary between the chiefs of the slave-making districts and the Brazilian carriers. The coast fever was his pay for this trip, and he was sent home by Commodore Read, invalided. Imperfectly patched up from the effects of this visitation, he volunteered for service with the army in Mexico, and was ordered with despatches, on a dare-die race through the country our troops had left, to overtake General Scott. Arriving himself at Perote, of a miserable escort of a jail-bird, that Gen. Worth had employed as a spy company, he got into a series of fights, in the last of which he received the sword of Generals Gaona and Torrejon, and had his horse killed under him, and was himself desperately wounded, while protecting the lives of his prisoners against his own men. Since then he has been cruising, and practising hydrography on the Coast Survey, up to the moment of receiving the telegraphic dispatch, accepting his urgent proffer of his services for the Arctic Expedition. He had the rice fever in the Cantof River, the plague in Egypt, the yellow fever at Rio, the congestive fever at Puebla, and the African fever on the coast. These, and wounds, and an organic disease of the heart, which he has had from boyhood, have been his preparations for the hazards he is encountering now."

G. Rand Thompson—a notorious robber, but a person of considerable education and intelligence, and of very respectable appearance, was arrested in Philadelphia, on Friday night week, and committed to prison. He has been a most successful boarding-house and hotel robber; and even while he was carrying on his bold felonies, he was associated with the most select company—knocking off his wine at lingering dinners, with all the zest of the most respectable bibber!

Scholar of Richmond, Va.—Mr. Anson Maria Moore, wife of Edmund C. Moore of Richmond, Va., put an end to her life on Sunday evening at Mrs. Claiborne's boarding-house, in that city, by the voluntary use of opium and laudanum. She was a lady of rare accomplishments, and no cause is assigned for the deed. Mr. Moore has lately returned from California.

A Singular Suicide.—A singular suicide recently took place in Paris. A Mons. V., an architect of property, went to a tenant lot near his residence, and placing a loaded pistol to either temple, pulled the triggers, and was instantly killed. A surgeon who traced the course taken by the two bullets, found that they had met each other in the center of the brain, and with such force that they were completely shattered!

A Monumental Hotel.—The Metropolitan Hotel about to be erected on Broadway, N. Y., will cost half a million of dollars. It is to be six stories high, have 500 rooms, and each room will have gas, and hot and cold water. There will be five miles of pipe in the building, and one mile of bells. There are to be 550 mirrors, costing $15,000. Most of these will come from Belgium, and two of them are nearly 100 feet square. The silver ware will cost $14,000; furniture $150,000; plate glass, for windows, $25,000.

SOMETHING NEW!

MERCHANT TAILORING ESTABLISHMENT.

SKELLY & HOLLEBAUGH, MERCHANT TAILORS,

RESPECTFULLY inform their friends and the public generally, that they have just returned from the City, and are now opening at their establishment in SOUTH BALTIMORE STREET, near the Diamond (old stand of J. H. SKELLY) the most choice selection of ever offered in this place, embracing French Black, Blue, Black-Green, Olive and Brown. Also French, Do-skin and Fancy

CLOTHES.

CASSIMERES,

Kentucky Jeans, Cotton Jeans, Tweeds, Cashmeres, Linen for Coats and Pantalons, &c., whilst their assortment of

FANCY VESTINGS,

is decidedly of the richest kind. Their FRIMINGS embrace every thing that may be required, such as plain and fancy Buttons, Alpaca, Silk Serge, plain Silk, Muslin, &c. They are also getting up a full assortment of

READY-MADE CLOTHING.

All the above will be disposed of at the lowest living rates, for Cash or Country Produce—to prove which they only ask a trial.

They are also prepared to make Garments at the shortest notice, and in the best manner—When required, they will turn out an entire suit in twenty-four hours!

J. H. SKELLY returns his sincere thanks for the patronage heretofore bestowed upon him, and asks its continuance for the new Firm. Goods bought elsewhere will be made up, as usual; and, when desired, he will assist customers in making selections of other stores as heretofore.

Spring and Summer Fashions for 1851 just received from New York.

Gettysburg, April 25.

NEW HARDWARE STORE.

THE Subscribers would respectfully announce to their friends and the public, that they have opened a NEW HARDWARE STORE in Baltimore street, adjoining the residence of David Ziegler, Gettysburg, in which they are opening a large and general assortment of

The Musical Department will be enriched by the contributions of the most popular Composers and Masters of Music now before the Public, who have been ever so desirous to be useful with the best original compositions and with Treatises on the Principles and Practice of the Art, in this and other countries.

The objects continually kept in view throughout the department are to awaken and cultivate musical talent, and to encourage and marshal the Musical Wives of America, expressing the whole cause of Music, Science and Art, Vocal and Instrumental, Popular and Scientific, audiencing it as a high art, inducing the Moral, Social,

Political and religious Education of the people.
All communications must be addressed postpaid to

THE MEDICAL FACULTY

In the United States, and also by the voluntary testimonials given in the pamphlets from Ladies and Physicians of the highest respectability, as certified by the most satisfactory authority.

This preparation is not a cure-all, but is intended especially for all those named complaints, and is proving its merit before our contemporary eyes, and which have hereunto received the skill and experience of the most accomplished Physicians of all countries, to a degree beyond that of perhaps any other remedy to which the human anatomy is heir.

THE INGREDIENTS, as certified by five medical authorities (see pamphlet), are all YERBES OF THE MOST PERFECT QUALITY, such as are known abundantly in the American Tropics.

The ingredients can be had separately, viz.: Cassia,
